ABSTRACT

For this report, which is a combination of the fourth and fifth annual reports on the subject, the FICE gathered data from 23 federal departments and agencies on program funds awarded to each of 114 predominantly black colleges. This data is compared with similar data collected for all higher education institutions in the country. Data include five categories of support: student assistance, training grants, plant expenses, operating expenses, and research and development. A brief analysis of the information and extensive tables are included, the latter organized both by agency and by college. (MSE)

FORWARD

This document combines the fourth and fifth in a series of annual survey reports by the Federal Interagency Committee on Education of the participation of predominantly black colleges and universities in Federal programs of educational support. FICE undertook these surveys at the request of the White House in 1969 as part of a larger policy effort to improve Federal relations with these institutions. The effect of this thrust has been substantial, producing well over a twofold increase in Federal funds awarded to predominantly black colleges by fiscal year 1972.

This study was prepared by the FICE staff. Barbara Montgomery supervised the study and wrote the report. Lawrence D. Kaplan collated the data for both years, and Bill Oliveri assisted in preparation of the tables. Barbara J. Coates and Mary Cox assisted by typing the manuscript and tables.

FEDERAL AGENCIES AND BLACK COLLEGES

FISCAL YEARS 1972 and 1973

BACKGROUND

In July 1969, the presidents of 20 black colleges participated in an Office of Education-sponsored meeting in Mobile, Alabama. Unhappy with what they felt was governmental insensitivity to the needs of their schools, these 20 college presidents drew up a resolution expressing outrage at the Federal Government's lack of understanding of the problems of black colleges and the exclusion of black schools from participation in Federal programs. They stated their concern that, although black colleges have an historical commitment to educating disadvantaged students, the Federal government continually bypassed them when allocating funds for this purpose.

The 20 black college presidents sent their resolution to the President, the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, and the HEW Assistant Secretary/Commissioner of Education. In his official reply on August 25, 1969, HEW Secretary Robert Finch acknowledged that the Federal Government had not always been responsive to the needs of black colleges. He noted, however, that even prior to the Mobile meeting, the Federal Interagency Committee on Education (FICE) had initiated efforts to improve the Federal performance in this area.

In October 1969, the White House, working closely with FICE staff, convened a meeting of top Federal education officials to discuss their agencies' record of support for black colleges and how it could be improved. After the meeting, program offices supplied FICE with figures on their support to black colleges in Fiscal Year 1969. The FICE staff collated that information into the first report, Federal Agencies and Black Colleges. FICE has repeated and refined the data gathering effort each year since then. This report covers the fourth and fifth years of the study.

Methodology

FICE collected data by questionnaire from 23 Federal departments and agencies on program funds awarded to each of the 114 predominantly black colleges listed in Appendix B. Similar data were requested for comparative purposes on funds awarded to all institutions of higher education. There were five categories of support:

Student assistance:	Grant or loan funds to defray students' personal educational expenses.
Training grants:	Awards for both student and institutional aid for the training of selected students in an academic discipline.

Plant expenses:	Support for construction and equipment.
Operating expenses:	Support for institutional program costs other than student aid or construction.
Research and development:	Support for either basic or applied research.

With the exception of the Atomic Energy Commission, which reported in terms of costs, dollar amounts represent obligations incurred by the agencies during the fiscal year specified regardless of when funds were actually expended. Obligations include total Federal funds awarded directly to colleges and universities, including repayable Federal loans. Federally subsidized private loans are not included. The Congressionally appropriated HEW line item for Howard University, which amounted to $61.3 million in FY 1972 and $59.0 million in FY 1973, is also excluded. Data in OE student aid funds for two of the Chicago City Colleges, Malcolm X and Kennedy-King, were not available because one award was made to the system's central office; sums for individual campuses could not be identified, although it is estimated that these two campuses together received more than $3 million for these programs in each of the two years of the study.

It is important to note that dollar totals shown in the various tables by institution may not add to the totals shown by agency. This is because some agencies supplied lump-sum amounts for particular programs without breaking them down by institution. These programs are footnoted in Appendix A.

Characteristics of Black Colleges

Black colleges are primarily small, undergraduate institutions. They serve a large proportion of low-income students--80 percent come from families earning less than $8,000 per year.[1] Yet these schools rely upon student tuition as a primary source of income. Tuition seldom pays even half of the educational costs at any institution, but most black colleges lack the large endowments and other income sources on which other institutions can fall back. Most also lack the specialized capabilities necessary to attract the Federal research and development (R & D) grants which include negotiated overhead cost supplements that would help defray operating expenses.

1. The National Goal of Equal Opportunity and the Historically Black Colleges. Statement submitted to David Mathews, Secretary, Department of Health, Education and Welfare on November 4, 1975 by the National Association for Equal Opportunity in Higher Education.

Enrollment in predominantly black institutions has risen considerably during the last five years, from 175,000 students in academic year 1970-71 to 247,000 in 1973-74. These figures represent an overall growth rate of 40.9 percent and an increase of from 2.1 to 2.6 percent of students in all institutions of higher education. Most of this growth is attributable to the establishment of new, public institutions in large urban communities such as Malcolm X and Kennedy-King in Chicago, Wayne County Community College in Detroit, and Compton College in Los Angeles; these and similar institutions were added to the FICE universe in FY 1971. It is estimated that predominantly black institutions enroll approximately one third of all black students attending college in the United States.

OVERVIEW

Most black colleges received little or no support from the Federal Government before passage of the Higher Education Act (HEA) of 1965. That legislation, for the first time, provided significant support programs for undergraduate colleges and students, expecially the disadvantaged. Since 1965, Federal funding to black colleges has improved markedly, primarily through the provision of student aid.

The following table shows how Federal funds for black colleges increased between FY 1969 and 1973:

Year	Total to Black Colleges	Total to All Colleges	Percent to Black
1969	$107,896,000	$3,782,451,000	2.9%
1970	125,479,000	3,667,923,000	3.4%
1971	170,580,000	3,888,306,000	4.4%
1972	257,018,000	4,637,637,600	5.5%
1973	250,094,400	4,492,567,000	5.6%

From FY 1969 to FY 1972, Federal funds for black colleges increased from $108 million to $257 million. During the same period, Federal support for all colleges and universities rose from $3.8 billion to $4.6 billion. The proportion of total funds going to black colleges increased from 2.9 percent in FY 1969 to 5.5 percent in FY 1972. In FY 1973, while the percentage of total funds going to black schools increased to 5.6, the amounts for both black and all institutions fell to $250 million and $4.5 billion respectively.

of support, has been declining since FY 1970 when it was 45 percent. For all institutions, student aid peaked in FY 1971 at 26 percent of the total and has also been declining ever since.

Federally funded student aid programs accounted for $106 million or 41 percent of all Federal assistance to black colleges in FY 1972, a dollar increase of $32 million over FY 1971. In 1973, this category of aid decreased by $24 million, to $82 million, or one-third of the total Federal black college aid that year. In 1972, Educational Opportunity Grants totaling $26 million assisted approximately 40,000 students enrolled in black colleges while National Defense Student Loans provided $20 million to more than 54,000. College Work-Study Grants totaling $53 million supported an estimated 85,000. Of the 1973 student aid total, Supplemental Opportunity Grants totaling $24 million, National Direct Student Loans with $21 million, and College Work-Study Grants of $29 million supported similar numbers of students.

It is changes in the College Work Study Program which account for the drop in 1973 funding for both black and all institutions. In 1972, the CWSP grant period was 18 instead of 12 months, covering the period from January 1971 to June 1972. For the extra six months, Congress added $156.4 million to the FY 1972 CWSP appropriation of $270.2 million. This money was used for students in college during the grant period as well as for those in college in 1972-73. This process pushed the CWSP figure for FY 1972 out of line with the FY 1971 and FY 1973 figures, as shown by the following table:

OE College Work-Study Program

FY	Amount to All Colleges	Amount to Black Colleges
1970	$156,986,000	$18,894,000
1971	157,638,200	22,951,300
1972	426,600,000	53,171,500
1973	270,200,000	28,924,400

Beginning in FY 1973, CWSP operated on a forward, rather than current, funding basis; i.e, FY 1973 money supported students in college in 1973-74. Funding reverted to normal levels--$29 million for black colleges and $270 million of for all colleges. Because of the abnormal increase in 1972, however, 1973 funds show a drop. Except for this phenomenon, the across-the-board totals for black and all institutions would show a slight increase in 1973.

Another, as yet unassessable, influence on the student aid situation is the Office of Education's Basic Educational Opportunity Grant (BEOG) program established by the Education Amendments of 1972. Figures for FY 1973, the first year the program was operational, show that black colleges received $5,645,000 in BEOG funds, which was 11.4% of the $49,616,000 awarded to all colleges. Data on BEOG's are not included in this report because grants were not made until after the conclusion of FY 1973, even though 1973 money was used. Data for 1973 and 1974 BEOG's will be included in FY 1974 survey.

A rapidly expanding source of financial assistance is the Guaranteed Student Loan Program of the Office of Education, which enables students to apply for insured loans from private lending institutions. The government pays interest benefits and special allowances to lending institutions while students are in college. In 1972, OE paid such subsidies on loans amounting to $21.6 million to 25,000 students attending black colleges. Estimates for 1973 indicate subsidies were paid on behalf of nearly 27,000 black college students borrowing approximately $27 million. GSLP data are not included in this report because the Federal funds involved do not go to institutions of higher education.

In addition to the Office of Education's student assistance programs, both the Social Security Administration and the Veterans Administration provide substantial support directly to eligible students. Data on SSA payments to students attending black colleges is not available, but the VA paid $25,964,000 in educational benefits in FY 1972 to 20,639 veterans enrolled in black colleges; in 1973 these figures were $26,852,000 for 22,717 veterans. These totals are not included in this report because, again, funds go to individuals, not institutions.

Institutional Aid

The Office of Education's HEA Title III program for Strengthening Developing Institutions increased funding of black colleges from approximatley $20 million in 1971 over $30 million in 1972. In 1973, more than $53.5 million in Title III money went to black colleges, an amount greater than the program's total funds the year before.

The Department of Agriculture provided institutional support amounting to $14 million in 1972 and nearly $18 million in 1973 to the 17 predominantly black land grant institutions.

The National Science Foundation provides support for a variety of science programs at black institutions. Activities include training, course and curriculum development and general support for science. NSF spent $9 million at black colleges in FY 1972 and $7 million in 1973.

Research and development grants provided 40 percent of the Federal funds going to all colleges and universities in FY 1972 and 43 percent in FY 1973, but only 10 percent and 12 percent respectively of the funds going to black colleges. Federal funding of R&D at black colleges quadrupled from $6 million in FY 1971 to $24 million in FY 1972. It rose again, to $30 million, in FY 1973. These sums are small, however, compared to R&D funds going to all institutions--nearly $2 billion in both 1972 and 1973.

Federal aid for construction, facilities, and equipment for black colleges decreased from $20 million in 1971 to $13 million in 1972 and $9 million in 1973, the result of the planned phaseout of these Federal programs. Similar support for all colleges, while of greater magnitude, has also been declining. Training grant support, which has fluctuated over the years, includes teacher training programs as well as Public Health Service support in biomedical and related areas. The latter is concentrated at a handful of black institutions with capabilities in these areas.

Distribution of Funds

Table I on page 7 shows Federal support to black colleges by control and level of institution. The 64 private institutions, with 25 percent of the total black college enrollment, received more than half the Federal funds going to black institutions in both FY 1972 and FY 1973. The top 10 black college recipients of Federal funds are shown in rank order in Table 2 on page 9, while Table 3 (page 10) shows the distribution of Federal funds among black colleges by increment of support.

Major Support Sources

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare contributed 82 percent of total Federal aid to black colleges in FY 1972 and 81 percent in 1973. All institutions received 70 and 69 percent respectively from HEW. Of the 1972 HEW total of $209 million for black colleges, $166 million came from the Office of Education and $30 million from the Public Health Service. In 1973, the HEW total went down to $202 million while OE support dropped to $155 million; Public Health Service support increased by 10 percent to $33 million. The HEW Office of Child Development awarded $9.5 million to black colleges in FY 1972 and $10.0 million in FY 1973 for Head Start programs.

Outside HEW, the primary sources of Federal support were the Department of Agriculture (USDA) and the National Science Foundation (NSF). The USDA increased its assistance from $2 million in 1971 to $14 million in 1972 and $18 million in 1973. NSF assistance grew from $3 million in 1971 to more than $9 million in 1972, but budget constraints required a cutback to $7 million in 1973.

Office of Economic Opportunity support to black colleges has remained fairly steady--$6.9 million in FY 1971, a slight drop to $6.5 million in 1972, back up to $6.9 million in 1973. Most of this money has been used for legal services training, research, and technical assistance. Planned reductions in college housing construction accounted for a drop in funds from the Department of Housing and Urban Development, from $5.9 million in 1971 to $5.2 million in 1972 and $3.3 million in 1973. Manpower training and public employment programs constitute the bulk of Department of Labor funds for black colleges which grew from $4.0 million in FY 1972 to $5.5 million in 1973.
